

General

Are you actively updating and supporting your Windows software?

Quite a while ago I had stopped working on my Windows software due to a career change (much longer hours) as well as starting a family. After owning my first Android phone though, I got interested in making Android apps so I started programming again, but this time for Android.

I'm still working long hours and still raising a family, and between those and spending lots of time working on my Android apps as well as this website, it is tough finding time to juggle all of these things. While I have not made any major updates to my Windows software in quite some time (with a couple exceptions), I do still fully support all Windows software found at this site.

Rest assured that if this website is still around, then so am I. I will continue to support everything I have done, whether it is Windows or Android related. 😊

I appreciate the continued interest in my software. It seems like only yesterday that I was working on those programs almost every day!

Unique solution ID: #1049
Author: Administrator
Last update: 2012-07-06 06:31